

BORED LA

Is Piero Golia in town?

Have you ever wanted a really easy way to let all of Sunset Boulevard know whether or not you're in town? Artist Piero Golia certainly has, and he's devised a pretty great solution. As part of LA><ART's Public Arts Initiative and Los Angeles Public Domain (L.A.P.D. for short), Golia is producing a sculptural installation on top of the Standard Hotel on Sunset called Luminous Sphere which is, you guessed it, a sphere that illuminates whenever the artist is in town.

Resembling a multi-story lollipop, it's like a Facebook status update – only sculptural and on top of a hotel instead of on top of your news feed. This is Golia's first public project in Los Angeles, so you'd be a fool to not check it out. It's probably advisable to make it part of a huge night out in Hollywood, right?

This entry was posted on Friday, April 9th, 2010 at 11:35 am and is filed under art. You can follow any responses to this entry through the RSS 2.0 feed. You can skip to the end and leave a response. Pinging is currently not allowed.